Celebrating First Link in Berrien County's 100-Mile Trail Vision

Imagine a day when someone could hop on a bicycle in New Buffalo, ride north through Harbor Country and St. Joseph, continue to South Haven and beyond, or pedal east from Niles to Buchanan and Berrien Springs without ever leaving a connected network of trails.

That's the vision behind "The Big Idea," an ambitious effort to create more than 100 miles of interconnected trails across Berrien County, linking communities, schools, parks, beaches, downtowns and natural areas through a county-wide non-motorized transportation network. The plan calls for eight major routes that would form the backbone of the system, including the Marquette Greenway, Red Arrow Trail, Lakeshore Trail, Indiana-Michigan River Valley Trail, McCoy Creek Trail, and several additional regional connectors.

This weekend (June 27-28), supporters will celebrate one piece of that broader vision during the second annual Celebrate Red Arrow Trail Days, highlighting the Red Arrow Trail that now connects New Buffalo, Union Pier, Lakeside, Harbert, and Sawyer.

"What is very exciting is that all of Berrien County is working together on a broader trail initiative," said Harbor Country Chamber board member Heather Grodowski. "The goal, ultimately, is to have a trail that follows Red Arrow (Highway) all the way up into the northern part of Berrien County, all the way into St. Joe, ultimately to connect even into South Haven and the counties north of us."

Adopted in 2023, The Big Idea is a vision for a regional network of public trails. It's championed by Friends of Berrien County Trails, Be Healthy Berrien, and the Southwest Michigan Planning Commission, and supported by many local municipalities. The goal is to connect communities and create a trail network that supporters believe will improve quality of life and strengthen the local economy. The master plan envisions 109 miles of multi-use paths with participation from all of Berrien County's municipalities and funding support from 22 communities and organizations.

This weekend's event invites residents and visitors to walk, bike, run or roll along the Red Arrow Trail while visiting more than 30 partici-

St. Joe Marks America's 250th Birthday

July is always a milestone month in St. Joe, bringing a wave of summer energy, visitors, and activities to our downtown. This year, the month carries even greater significance, as our town has the opportunity to join together in celebrating a historic milestone: America's 250th birthday.

This Semiquincentennial anniversary provides a meaningful moment to reflect on our history, celebrate our shared values, and enjoy the community spirit that makes St. Joe a special place to live and visit. To mark the occasion, there's a great lineup of events planned throughout July.

The annual St. Joe Fireworks will be on Friday, July 3rd. The display can be seen from various points downtown and along the shoreline. Still, the best seat in the house this year will be at the Shadowland Pavilion, where the light display will be paired with the annual live performance by our Southwest Michigan Symphony Orchestra. Having live symphonic music accompany the fireworks over Lake Michigan will make for an incredible evening. It is an ideal way to kick off the holiday weekend with family, friends, and neighbors.

Following a fun and safe holiday weekend on Wednesday, July 8th at 6:00 PM, community members will gather at Whirlpool Centennial Park where Pat Moody will deliver a live reading of the Declaration of Independence. To make the event truly memorable, the reading will be set against a striking visual backdrop of 250 American flags displayed throughout the park. It promises to be a great opportunity for families to experience a piece of our nation's history together and its commitment to the democratic experiment.

The theme continues later in the month with an event that you will not want to miss. On July 18th and 19th, St. Joe will host a full Revolutionary War reenactment, presented by the local organization "Lest We Forget."

Known for their dedication to preserving history and honoring veterans, Lest We Forget will bring our founding moment to life at Riverview Park. The weekend will feature authentic historical encampments, period uniforms, and live tactical demonstrations. It is an immersive, educational experience that offers a closer look at what life may have looked like 250 years ago, making it a true highlight of St. Joe's summer celebrations.

Alongside all of this, July also marks the official return of the weekly programs that keep our downtown vibrant all season long. It is the official kickoff for Family Night in the Plaza, bringing collaborative family fun to Court Place Plaza. Our signature music series also returns to full swing, including the Wednesday night Brown Bag concerts and the Friday night concerts. These free concerts offer the perfect excuse to grab takeout from a local restaurant, a social district beverage, and enjoy great music by the lake.

Additionally, make sure to mark your calendars for Friday, July 17th, when the annual Mike Yore Memorial Car Show returns to downtown St. Joseph. Downtown will fill up with over 200 beautiful, vintage vehicles, classic muscle cars, and unique hot rods. It is a fantastic afternoon and evening event that celebrates timeless automotive ingenuity.

Whether you are looking forward to the symphony under the fireworks at Shadowland Pavilion, standing among the 250 flags at Whirlpool Centennial Park, exploring the revolutionary camps with "Lest We Forget," or simply enjoying a warm evening concert in the plaza, there is something for everyone in St. Joe this July. As you plan your visits downtown, please remember that paid parking is limited to the streets, while all the downtown parking lots are completely free; just make sure to pay attention to the time limits!

These events represent the very best of our town—collaboration, history, and community pride. We invite you to join us downtown, participate in the events, and help us make America's 250th birthday part of a memorable summer in St. Joe. See you downtown!

4 Signs Your AC Isn't Ready For Summer

As southwest Michigan gears up for another unpredictable summer along the Lake Michigan shoreline, your air conditioning system is about to face its toughest test. With humid days, sudden heat spikes, and shoulder-season temperature swings common in Berrien County, a failing AC can quickly turn your home into an uncomfortable—and expensive—sweatbox. Regular maintenance isn't a luxury; it's essential for efficiency, comfort, and avoiding costly breakdowns.

Here are four clear warning signs that your AC may not be summer-ready. Addressing them early with professional service can save you money and headaches.

1. Warm or Uneven Airflow

If your vents are blowing lukewarm air or certain rooms stay noticeably warmer than others, your system is struggling. This often stems from low refrigerant levels, dirty coils, clogged filters, or failing components like the blower motor. In Michigan's humid climate, poor airflow also leads to higher indoor moisture, fostering mold and mildew. Don't ignore this—reduced cooling capacity forces the unit to work harder, spiking energy bills and risking total failure during peak heat.

2. Rising Energy Bills

A sudden jump in your electric bill, even without dramatic weather changes, is a classic red flag. An aging or poorly maintained AC can lose 5-15% efficiency per year, according to industry benchmarks. Common culprits include refrigerant leaks, worn capacitors, or accumulated dirt and debris restricting heat exchange. This inefficiency translates to hundreds of extra dollars. A professional tune-up restores efficiency, often paying for itself quickly through lower monthly bills.

3. Strange Noises or Vibrations

Your AC should hum quietly in the background. Grinding, squealing, rattling, or banging sounds signal mechanical trouble—loose parts, failing bearings, a damaged compressor, or debris in the unit. Clicking or buzzing when the system tries to start may indicate electrical issues. These noises aren't just annoying; they warn of impending breakdowns that could leave you without cooling on the hottest days. Southwest Michigan's variable weather, with storms and high winds, can exacerbate wear on outdoor units.

4. Frequent Cycling or Constant Running

If your AC turns on and off more often than usual (short cycling) or runs nonstop without reaching the set temperature, something's wrong. This can result from an oversized or undersized unit, thermostat problems, dirty evaporator coils, or low refrigerant. This strains the system, reduces lifespan, and wastes energy. Proper sizing and maintenance tailored to local conditions—like Lake Michigan's humidity—keep your system operating smoothly.

Don't wait for a mid-July emergency call. Scheduling a professional AC tune-up now can extend equipment life, improve indoor air quality, and ensure reliable performance when you need it most. Full-service HVAC providers handle everything from refrigerant recharges and coil cleaning to comprehensive diagnostics and repairs—far beyond what DIY filter changes can achieve.

A Natural Approach to Skin Restoration

Platelet-rich plasma (PRP) and platelet-rich fibrin (PRF) are regenerative treatments made from one of the most powerful healing tools available: your own blood. A small sample is drawn and placed in a centrifuge, where it is spun to separate and concentrate platelets above their normal level in circulation.

Platelets are best known for helping blood clot, but their real magic is in the signals they carry. When activated, they release growth factors. These proteins help guide blood vessel formation, collagen production, cell renewal, and tissue remodeling. In simpler terms, they tell the body where to repair, rebuild, and regenerate.

This same healing response is used throughout medicine, including orthopedics, sports medicine, wound care, and surgery. PRP has been used to support recovery in tendon and ligament injuries, osteoarthritis, chronic wounds, and post-surgical healing. PRF is often considered the next generation of platelet therapy. Because it is processed without anticoagulants, it forms a soft fibrin matrix that acts like a natural scaffold, holding platelets in place and releasing growth factors gradually over several days rather than all at once.

In aesthetics, PRP and PRF are used to improve skin quality and support hair restoration. When injected or applied with microneedling, they stimulate fibroblasts, the cells responsible for producing collagen and elastin. Over time, this can improve skin texture, tone, fine lines, crepiness, and under-eye quality. For hair restoration, platelet-derived growth factors can help support weakened follicles, encourage a healthier growth cycle, and improve the appearance of thickness and density.

Because PRP and PRF come from your own body, the risk of allergic or immune reaction is very low. However, the quality of the treatment depends on the quality of the blood. PRP can only deliver what your own platelets contain. Hydration, nutrition, inflammation, smoking, medications, and overall wellness all matter. Avoiding smoking, staying well hydrated, eating nutrient-rich foods, managing inflammation, and abstaining from anti-platelet medications such as NSAIDs before treatment can help optimize platelet activity and growth-factor richness.

Not all PRP systems are equal. The Arthrex ACP and ACP Max systems are designed to create a clean, concentrated, and consistent regenerative product using a closed, sterile preparation process. ACP Max can process up to 90 mL of blood and deliver platelet concentrations up to twelve times above baseline, while reducing inflammatory neutrophils by as much as 98.9%.

The Arthrex process also preserves platelet-derived exosomes, tiny cellular messengers that help coordinate repair, renewal, and inflammation control. By capturing concentrated growth factors and exosomes at the point of care, Arthrex offers a more complete regenerative product than conventional single-spin methods.

In honor of America's 250th birthday, we are taking $250 off select treatments. Beginning June 29, you can take $250 off our PRP/PRF Regenerative Rejuvenation Package. Don't delay. The special ends July 3. Each week, we'll feature an exclusive offer on one of our most popular treatments, providing patients the opportunity to save $250 while investing in their skin health and self-confidence. TEXT START to (269) 250-5638 to be the first to know about our specials.

pating businesses between New Buffalo and Sawyer.

"This year we're doing a little bit different format," Grodowski said. "It will last for the whole weekend."

Visitors can stop at participating businesses to enter a raffle featuring prize packages donated by merchants along the trail.

"The idea is really just to get people out exploring along the way," Grodowski said. "These trails have been a great enhancement to the community."

The Red Arrow Trail officially opened last year and occupies space created when Red Arrow Highway was converted from four lanes to three.

"Prior to this, it was a four-lane highway, and it was dangerous because you would have people that would cycle or bike or walk even on the highway or off in the grass," said Chikaming Township Parks Director Joe Martin. "Now this trail, with the road reduced to three lanes, gave room for the actual linear bike path."

Martin said the trail has quickly become a community asset.

"It's promoting commerce. It's promoting getting out and walking and biking along the trail or rollerblading, whatever it may be, non-motorized," he said.

The event was originally created to support businesses that endured months of construction while the trail was being built.

"Those businesses were already there, and they went through a lot during the construction," Grodowski said.

Now, organizers say the trail is generating economic benefits by encouraging visitors to slow down and spend time in local communities.

"If you look at the economic data, economies grow where bike trails exist," Grodowski said. "It gets people on the ground in a different way."

She said many visitors first discover Harbor Country by bicycle and later return for longer stays.

"Biking is the gateway to visiting the community," Grodowski said. "Those people ultimately become residents of this community because they love it here and realize this is an incredible lifestyle."

Martin said he recently met a couple from Indiana who rented bicycles in New Buffalo, stayed overnight in Harbor Country and used the trail to visit local restaurants.

"It brought a smile to my face because that is truly the intent of what we had planned when we completed this trail," he said.

The trail also has become a popular amenity for local residents.

"For us, the trail has just personally been such a gift," said Grodowski, an avid cyclist. "You can relax and enjoy your cycling experience and feel safe."

For organizers, Trail Days is both a celebration of what has already been built and a reminder of what still lies ahead.

"There is so much more trail to come," Grodowski said. "It's super exciting."

Information about Celebrate Red Arrow Trail Days and The Big Idea campaign is available at BerrienTrails.org. The long-range plan calls for a county where residents and visitors can travel safely between communities, parks, beaches, and businesses on an interconnected network of trails that advocates believe could become one of Southwest Michigan's defining assets.

St. Joseph stationery shop expands to new location

One of downtown St. Joseph's most unique small shops is moving down the street and around the corner to a larger and more visible location for shoppers. Yours Truly, Elizabeth is a stationery, quality pens and accessories shop specializing in the increasingly rare practice of sending personal written notes and letters.

Owner Elizabeth Ross opened the store at 615 Pleasant Street two years ago, saying "Paper brings people together!" By the end of July, she plans to move to her new location at 511 Ship Street, just east of the Whitcomb Tower Retirement Residence.

Ross made the announcement in a recent social media post:

"We're just one month away from the big move! Progress is being made, and it's so exciting to see our new space slowly coming to life. Each week brings a little more charm and character as we prepare to welcome you to our new home at 511 Ship Street in downtown St. Joseph, MI."

If you haven't stopped by the shop, Ross describes it this way, "We offer a curated collection of high quality, specialty notebooks, pens, journals, gift wrap, cards and gifts from all over the world. With a focus on exceptional customer service and a warm and helpful atmosphere, we aim to connect people and build a love for all things paper in our community."

Dave Says

Balancing Gazelle Intensity and a Long-Distance Relationship

Dear Dave,

I'm 25, and I work as a property manager making $65,000 a year. I'm in the middle of paying off my debts, but I'm struggling to stay intense about it. I'm in a long-distance relationship that forces me to spend a lot of money to see my boyfriend. He's not working right now, and it's been a while since his last job. That means I'm always spending extra on gas and other things to make the eight-hour, round-trip drive twice a month so we can spend time together. We've been together for almost two years, but I'm honestly beginning to wonder if it's worth it. He doesn't seem to mind not working, and that bothers me, too.

Naya

Dear Naya,

It should bother you. So, why isn't this guy working? Why isn't he putting forth a little effort to come see you? Are you saying he doesn't even have a part-time job? From what you've told me, it doesn't sound like he's got much standing in the way of visiting you once in a while.

A man who wants to work can always find something to do. Tell him to run down to Home Depot, and buy a leaf blower or a lawn mower. Help him out with the purchase, if you can afford it. Most rich people are afraid of leaves and grass, and they'll pay someone to take care of them. If he can't—or won't—do that, then as far as I'm concerned he's disqualifying himself from being boyfriend material, let alone husband material.

Everything you're seeing in him right now will be magnified in marriage—both good and bad. You've got a bright future ahead of you, young lady. You've got a good job, and you're smart enough to realize the wisdom in getting out of debt and handling your finances in a mature and responsible way. You've got so much going for you. And I want you to start putting more value on yourself.

Naya, you need to stay in your town, and invite him to come see you. If he's willing to find a way to make some money and starts doing this, he might be worthy of having an important place in your life. But, if he's unwilling to become gainfully employed, and put out at least a little effort to see you on his dime, I think you should move on.

— Dave

Yakking about Owl Yack

Today we're talking owl vomit.

No, it's not another column about excellent nicknames. Although if you know someone who goes by Owl Vomit, or any of the 516 other vomit-related terms, let me know right away!

Yep, we're talking actual owl vomit. And we'll peek into the rather cloistered yet lucrative world of people who find, and yes, collect and – what? – sell this form of bird barf.

Item 1: Why in the wide wide world of sports am I writing about raptor ralph? Well, I just received the latest copy of Window, a thrice-yearly magazine produced by No. 4 son's alma mater, Way WAY-Away University (WWU, a school on the other side of the continent). And the cover story featured a husband-and-wife pair of WWU alumnae – Bret and Kim – who make their living selling owl pellet s.

Item 2: "Pellet" is the standard term for owl upchuck, or hawk hacks, or eagle ejecta. Bret describes pellets thusly: "They look like fecal material. They're blackish and roundish. They crunch when you step on them because they have skeletons inside them."

Item 3: The owl pellet "industry" is based almost exclusively on the chunks blown by Barn Owls. Amongst all raptors, Barn Owls have a uniquely delicate constitution, aka a weak digestive system. They chomp their chow (mostly small rodents) completely whole, but they can't digest fur and bone. So, after their gizzards and other internal organs are done with din-din, Barn Owls chunder hairball-like chunks, often containing two or three different complete skeletons.

By the way, Barn Owls are such efficient mouse-munchers that vineyards in California put up nest boxes to encourage as many owls as possible to dine among their grapes.

Item 4: Thus, the pellet are – with absolutely no assembly required (beyond "sterilizing" and packaging) – ideal for teaching our youth a thing or two. Specifically, they're sold by the many thousands for science education at schools and summer camps. Apparently, pellets are way less traumatic to dissect than the previous critter of choice – live frogs. Which, prior to dissection, had to be made, you know, not alive. Usually right in the classroom. (Cue shrieking sixth-graders.)

Item 5: There is no Item 5.

Item 6: An experienced collector of pellets says a quick look can tell him the origin of any particular piece of puke. Owls living in areas with more rainfall, such as the Pacific Northwest, produce moist, loose pellets. Whereas birds from low-precipitation areas like California retch up drier, more compact product.

Nevertheless, the spew of Cali birds, living in the aforementioned splendor near wine grapes, are in a class by themselves. It's due to their splendid bouquets! It's so much more delightful while dissecting to inhale the aromas of a Pinot purge, a Beaujolais boke, or a Cabernet cough-up. And occasionally, collectors find that coveted favorite of owl pellet connoisseurs, the crème-de-la-crème – a viticultured vomitus of vinous varietals!

Item 7: A "love letter" from one of Bret and Kim's teacher customers goes like this:

"Dear Friends, My students love your huge pellets! When the dissection displays were done, the children were so proud, they shared them. Each kid had the pellet display for 3 months in their home. They learned so much; for example, owl pellets can really gross-out parents and siblings!"

Carry Your Cross

"Whoever does not take up his cross and follow me is not worthy of me. Whoever finds his life will lose it, and whoever loses his life for my sake will find it." (Matthew 10:38–39).

Hard words to hear. They can be especially hard when you consider who said them. Jesus is often thought of as an extremely patient, compassionate, and loving person. Yet he spoke these hard words to his friends and followers.

What about these words makes them hard? Jesus mentions the cross. Jesus is not only known for his compassion and patience but also for his cross. He died a brutal death. If you investigated death by crucifixion, you would see that it was one of the most brutal ways to execute criminals in all of history. The cross would not have brought delight to the minds of his hearers.

When Jesus asks his followers to pick up their cross and follow him, he is serious about the commitment he commands.

We would rather pick up our pillow and rest in a comfortable life. We would rather snuggle up with the blanket of ease and cozy up to the cushy life. I don't want the splinters on my back from choosing the hardship of following Jesus. I don't want my shoulders to ache with the weight of fighting temptations. Comfy over cross. That's exactly what the devil wants us to choose.

Pain now or pain later; you eventually must choose. Choosing comfort now, Jesus says, can lead to the pain of loss later. These are hard words that we don't want to hear, but Jesus said them.

What makes you want to do hard things? A bigger purpose or goal helps. Why did Jesus pick up his cross? Because of you. You were his goal. You were his purpose. He ran to the cross like a firefighter diving into danger to rescue you. He rescues you from your desire for comfort. He chose the cross so he could find you. He lost his life so he could gain yours. He took on the brutality of the cross so your cross wouldn't be nearly as hard as his.

Jesus said that you find eternal life when you give up temporary comfort. Picking up your cross and following Jesus is a daily task fought against the idea of comfort, but it is worth it. It is also a blessed life now, not just later. Some of the happiest people in the world today are not those who have the most comfortable lives. They are happy because of the simplicity of their lives and because of Jesus' blessing. Listening to these hard words and living them out can lead to a life of fulfillment.

What comforts are restricting you from picking up your cross to follow Jesus?

Prayer: Dear Jesus, I am sorry that I choose me over you when I choose my comfort. It restricts my life of following you. Thank you for these hard words that help arouse me and strengthen me for the task of listening to you. Amen.
